The menu brings magic to cooked and uncooked sauces and salsas like delicious mahogany-hued guajilo-pineapple-cinnamon sauce. There are fork-tender meats prepared with chiles, garlic, and spices used as marinades which make chicken and grilled meats melt in your mouth. Both Santana and Santibañez are committed to simplifying the complexities of their native cuisine, while sharing their fascination with its multicultural currents.

<http://www.sanfelipescantina.com/>

2000 E. Rio Salado Parkway | Tempe, AZ | 480.736.8226

Rarely does a restaurant stand out from the "corporate cookie cutter formula" and still turn a profit for every key operating time slot while maintaining an air of independence that makes for such great fun with customer and employee alike. San Felipe's Cantina has certainly met this challenge while retaining its customers base, productive employees with awesome moral and most of all a profitable business. It is Coastal Mexican food with an attitude served up alongside a night life atmosphere that keeps the customers returning for their much needed 'Local Spring Break' here at San Felipe's Cantina. San Felipe's is the 'brainchild' of long-time high school buddies Jim Keller and Drew Gruver in Phoenix, Arizona – The Valley of the Sun. Back in the late '70's inspired by frequent trips to Rocky Point and San Felipe, Mexico for 'Spring Breaks' throughout the ASU and NAU college school year, the dream was born at a sandy beach camp amid pyramided cases of canned beer, barbecued Mexican shrimp, cheap tequila, tiny bikini's and some musically inclined friends with sand filled guitars.
